

GIRL INSPIRED SCHWARZ TO WIN GREAT ART PRIZE

Father Greets Long-Lost Son, Who Declines Proposal to Live With Him.

"Who is that? Is it Franz? Yes. Yes. My boy! This is your father. Don't you know him?"

Frank Schwarz, sixty-three years old, soldier of fortune and old time hotel waiter, was talking over the telephone. For the first time in seven years he was hearing the voice of his boy Frank, the artist who leaped from poverty and obscurity overnight to the fame of a winner of the Prix de Rome.

In a few hurried words in German the elderly father had arranged for his son to come to his little apartment at No. 149 Avenue A for a reunion last night. But he had scarcely laid down the receiver before he became so nervous over the coming interview that he jumped into a taxicab and went down to No. 1 Perry Street to see his son.

Frank Schwarz Jr. was out when the elder man arrived at the little attic room where he had been taken in by friends when he ran out of funds and was evicted from his shabby tenement room at No. 356 East 19th Street.

Just as his father was leaving the house to return to his home, convinced that his son would not return, they met in the dark hallway.

After an affectionate reunion Young Schwarz told newspaper men he was pleased to see his father and to know that he was not dead, but that he would not return to him.

"I have stood on my own feet all this time and I will continue to do so," he said. "My father is mighty kind in his desire to help me, but with the Prix de Rome I can get along without his assistance, and I am sure he has not enough money to warrant my making myself a burden to him." Young Schwarz had been taken in by Mrs. Grace Hazzard and Miss Emily Price, his friends, who live in the Perry Street garret. Until he learned he had won the painting prize he steadfastly refused to go there. He said the only inspiration he had for the prize-winning picture, "A Tribute to Jerusalem," was the aid given him by a girl now in the West.

For the Weakened Foot

Do not trifle with your feet, for neglecting them may mean years of suffering. When their muscles or bones have weakened you should get without delay the Arch Preserver Shoe to correct and strengthen them.

The patented bridge construction of this shoe, entirely unnoticeable, provides the only proper support upon which the arch can comfortably rest. You will find the Arch Preserver Shoe to be the most effective and efficient shoe ever offered for the relief and correction of the arch-troubled foot.
